“A chillingly plausible vision of a society slowly poisoning itself.”

—Village Voice

“A gutsy, discomfiting movie about going along to get along, and just how dangerous that impulse can be.”

—AV Club

“Essential viewing.”

—Film Inquiry

“The actors are wonderful.”

—New York Times

Marine Le Pen was defeated in the French election that brought Emmanuel Macron to power, but her far right-wing party, with its nationalist, anti-immigrant platform, lives on to feed the fear and resentment that begot Donald Trump's election.

THIS IS OUR LAND is a fictionalized story of an attractive working-class single mother in the North of France who naively agrees to run for mayor, representing the Patriotic Bloc. Lucas Belvaux, who previously directed RAPT, about a French politician's kidnapping, deals with another type of kidnapping here: With the help of a charming André Dussollier as the town's esteemed physician, the Populists' rhetoric seizes control of the minds of the electorate. With Catherine Jacobs as the blonde-bobbed leader who never met an angry crowd she couldn't make angrier.
