

"ONE OF THE MOST SECRETLY INFLUENTIAL OF ALL FILMMAKERS."

RICHARD BRODY, THE NEW YORKER

Jean Rouch was an inspiration for the French New Wave, and a revolutionary force in ethnography and the study of Africa. Beginning in 1955 with his most controversial film THE MAD MASTERS, through 1969's darkly comic LITTLE BY LITTLE, these films represent the most sustained flourishing of Rouch's practice of "shared anthropology," a process of collaboration with his subjects.

Astonishing on their own terms, now restored and released for the first time, EIGHT FILMS BY JEAN ROUCH is essential for anyone interested in better understanding the development of ethnography and the cross-currents of colonialism and post-colonial social change in Africa, as well as documentary film practice, film history, and world cinema as a whole.
